For the most part, most students seem satisfied with this class. No one wrote a “needs improvement” comment. In particular, many students seemed glad to have the opportunity to think about the experience of black Americans, and many seemed to think that the style of the class: weekly readings/study questions/time in class for confirmation/discussion was good. The lowest rating given by students was in response to question # 6 (授業の難易度は妥当である). 4 students gave an A+, 4 students an A, 7 students an A-, 3 students a B+, 1 student a B, and one student a C+. It's impossible to know whether students thought the class was too easy or too hard from this information (no one wrote a comment saying it was too hard!), but I can guess that more thought it was hard than easy. In any case, I think the level of the class was “challenging” and “fair.” At the same time, I realize it's important to keep an idea on students who are struggling a bit.
